Selected Excerpts of the Interviews

Participants	Excerpts of the interviews
Amirah*, a 21-year-old university student	"I've definitely become more aware of textile waste since taking a sustainability module in university. It opened my eyes to how damaging fast fashion is." "I try to donate old clothes or bring them to the recycling bin near my block, but honestly, I still buy a lot of clothes online because it's convenient." "If there were more visible upcycling workshops or student-led thrift events, I'd join."
Sherry*, a 30-year-old working woman with two young children	"I'm aware that the fashion industry harms the environment, but with two young kids and a full-time job, I honestly don't have time to sort and recycle clothes regularly." "Sometimes I donate to charities or pass clothes down to my siblings or cousins, but I wouldn't say I'm an active recycler." "I have used the two collection points that are near to the childcare centre and supermarket occasionally."
Jason*, a 19-year-old youth serving National Service	"My friends and I love thrifting…we buy second-hand clothes (and sometimes other items) from thrift stores or online resale platforms. It's a popular way for youth to shop sustainably and affordably. It's fun and way cheaper than shopping at the mall. Plus, it feels like we're doing our part for the planet." "I know that textile waste is a problem, but we don't really learn much about it in school unless you take Geography or General Paper, I suppose." "Upcycling sounds cool, but I don't have the skills or tools. Maybe a workshop could be useful to pick up some skills and tips."
